Chaim Weizmann's Son Reported Lost After RAF Flight

By Jewish Telegraph Agency LONDON—Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the Jewish Agency, has postponed his scheduled trip to the United States after receiving official confirmation from the Air Ministry that his 24-year old son, Michael, a flyer in the Royal Air Force, is missing.

The information from the Air Ministry stated that Michael is reported as having failed to return from a patrol assignment. The place of the actual operations was not mentioned, but it is known that he was sent out on a reconnaissance flight to Brest shortly before the German battle-ships steamed from there into the Dover straits last week.

Dr. Weizmann received the message from the Air Ministry over the telephone five minutes before he and Mrs. Weizmann were ready to board an airplane to Lisbon for the flight to New York. They immediately cancelled their passage and returned from the air field to London to await more information on the fate of their son.

The blow for Dr. and Mrs. Weizmann is especially hard because Dr. Weizmann regarded Michael, who is a gifted chemist, as his successor in conducting the important research work in chemistry on which he is now engaged. Michael, a lieutenant in the air force, was in charge of a fighter plane. His craft was last heard from when his radio operator signalled that engine trouble had developed while the plane was over the Atlantic. Last week Michael was given a special 24-hour furlough to say good-bye to his parents prior to their scheduled departure for the United States. Dr. Weizmann's older son served with the British forces until recently when he was discharged on account of ill health.

PENSACOLA JEWRY CORDIAL

To the editor,

I would like to take this means of expressing my appreciation to you for mailing me the weekly issues of The Jewish Post. It does serve the function of acquainting one, to a degree, with current Jewish developments at home and on the world scene, particularly at a station where Jewish contacts are few.

The nearby town of Pensacola has a small Jewish population, but their cordial hospitality to all service men sets a standard to be vied for by communities anywhere. The Temple sponsors 2 socials monthly, besides the weekly meetings at which many of Pensacola's prominent citizens are invited to speak. Arrangements are under way for a Purim celebration and for placing the Jewish men in homes or at the

SAYS SEGAL'S STAND BASED ON FEAR

To the editor:

I hope you will find space to print the enclosed answer to Mr. Segal's column of last week.

Dear Mr. Segal:

I see that you too have become one of the 120% Americans in our midst. It is with great fervor and little intelligence that you flaunt your super unilateral loyalty in the face of any one who will pay attention to it. Your nationality, you say, is American and nothing else. May I express my opinion, by saying, that you were moved to this position, not by a sense of patriotism, but by a sense of fear, which is unworthy of the name Jew or American.

In column after column you have written on the subject of anti-Semitism, until I thought you were able to write on nothing else. At last, your ideas have become thoroughly crystallized, in your anti-Zionist stand. You are just afraid.

I shall attempt to show you that my conclusions are not based on any sense of righteous indignation, but pure logic. You say that you consider it a conflict of loyalties to be an American citizen, and at the same time play the politics of another nation. Sir, an intelligent American takes pride in his country, not because he was born there, but because his country personifies that which is Godly and democratic. His loyalties to America are an outgrowth of his love of God and democracy. Hence, if it is the idea to which he is loyal, his expression of this ideal is not confined to one outlet. It may be expressed in different channels. For example, if I am born to be a musician, and through fate, I first express this quality through singing, it would not lessen my love for music if I studied an instrument also. It merely shows that my love of music is great enough so that it can be expressed in two channels.

Similarly, if a Jew has two outlets for his love of democracy, and if political Zionism is one of these outlets, he certainly should not be condemned for this. On the contrary, he should be praised.

Now may I go to the second point of my argument,—to prove that your motivating force was fear. You said that one who proclaims his Jewish nationality puts you in the embarrassing position of arguing your Americanism. Why do you have to argue your Americanism? It is being questioned by no one. Louisville to Enter Many Teams In Jewish Post Bowling Tournament, Sunday, March 15

Although entry blanks were mailed out only this week for the second annual Jewish Post Bowling Tournament for lodges of the Indiana-Kentucky State Association of B'nai B'rith at the Parkway Alleys, Sunday, March 15, many lodges have already signified their intention of sending teams to the highly-regarded contest.

Louisville Lodge of B'nai B'rith, which sent eight teams to the national tournament in Columbus Sunday, through its bowling league chairman Louis Perlin, said that a large number of that city's bowlers plan to participate in the tournament.

In addition, East Chicago, Gary, South Bend and Fort Wayne, the four Indiana lodges, which in addition to the Indianapolis lodge took part in the national tournament, all announced their intention of taking part in the play at Indianapolis.

The Jewish Post tournament will be held in conjunction with the annual group meeting of the Central Indiana Lodges of the State Association, and will be climaxed with a banquet and a full day of B'nai B'rith activities.

The Anderson lodge, which last year won first place in the tournament, will be represented in full again. South Bend's second place winning team will be on hand, but three of the five members of the team have been drafted, Dr. Lou Fishman, of Mishawaka, chairman of Mamre Lodge's Bowling League, announced.

Prize awards will be made in both divisions, team and singles play, and in addition trophies will be awarded, as well as merchandise prizes.

The notorious Julius Streicher, of whom little has been heard since the outbreak of the war, has arrived in Paris to prepare for the publication of a French edition of his pornographic anti-Jewish publication "Der Stürmer," it is reported this week.

SUTIN PRAISES EVANSVILLE LODGE, PUSHES SPRING MEMBERSHIP DRIVES

Special
TERRE HAUTE—Urging lodges of Indiana to expend every effort towards successful Spring membership campaigns, Lewis R. Sutin, of this city, second vice president of District Grand Lodge No. 2 of B'nai B'rith, this week pointed to the drive in Evansville's Thisbe Lodge as an incentive to other campaigns.

"Thisbe lodge of Evansville, under the chairmanship of Louis Mack, is waging a dynamic campaign—a bitter struggle between Captains Sol Ellenstein and Hyman Levin for victory," Mr. Sutin said. "The goal of Evansville," Mr. Sutin declared, "is 75 new members, and the drive is known as the 'Ferd H. Kluga Victory March' in honor of the hard-working deputy for Southern Indiana."

Mr. Sutin also praised the work of America Lodge of Hammond, which he said is striving for a membership of 200, and will initiate a class of 100 on March 4 in honor of Morris Dobson.

Other lodges which already have announced impending campaigns are Indianapolis, Lafayette, Terre Haute and Fort Wayne, Mr. Sutin stated.

Mr. Sutin issued the following statement:

"There must be no appeasement toward strengthening Jewish ranks during this emergency. Every B'nai B'rith lodge with a potential membership increase must see that each prospect is personally contacted in the spring membership campaign which begins on March 9th.

"Every B'nai B'rith lodge is asked to thoroughly comb the prospects in its community for membership—because in strengthening B'nai B'rith, the lodge is, in effect, strengthening the National Defense effort, in which effort the manpower and resources of our Order have been primarily directed."

My Great Fault

SOMETIME when, in deepest gloom, I wonder what can be the matter with me, the Jew (I am so unpopular), I fall back on the Ten Commandments for explanation. What, I ask myself, is my great fault? Yes, I have as many sins as the next man. I am given to vanity occasionally. Sometime I let myself go in wanting more than I am entitled to have. Then, in moments of cruelty, I have found myself wishing for sudden death for Hitler.

But these are also the sins of most men who are not Jews. They may be vain, greedy, false, cruel, yet no special penalties attach to them on account of these sins. It is said of them tolerantly that they are just human beings and what's to be expected of poor human clay since it is what it is?

But such indulgence is not for me, the Jew. Even when I turn out to be a saint or a light-bearing prophet or a sage or a great musician delighting the hearts of men even for 100 years, I am not a satisfactory person. (Jesus is rejected by Nazis because he was a Jew; Mendelssohn's music is prohibited in Germany and his statue has been knocked down; Einstein is in exile.)

So a Jew looks around to discover what, if anything, special is the matter with him. What, he inquires, is my special sin? And that's how I come to fall back on the Ten Commandments for the answer.

Perhaps it's because the Ten Commandments came through me that I, the Jew, am not a popular man. People don't like to be told the decent way to behave if they prefer other ways. The liar's tongue may feel uncomfortable as it utters its lies, remembering, as it does, the Commandment that specifically prohibits lying.

He could lie even more smoothly if this ancient inhibition were not on his tongue. The Commandment came to him when he was still a small child. His Sunday School teacher told him it was the Jew who got this Commandment for him from Sinai. The Jewish Commandment scatters sand on the slick perfection of his falsehood. "Thou shalt not bear false witness." The resentful Haman, original among the anti-Semites, said: "Their (the Jews') laws are diverse from those of every people."

Then there is the matter of killing. The Commandment, "Thou shalt not kill" always has been an annoyance to every warmaker. It always comes up somehow. When the dead are being piled up to the height of hillocks, the Jewish commandment is being softly repeated: "Thou shalt not kill! Thou shalt not kill!" It is in the voices of mothers or in the sighs of men in whom holiness survives.

(Sometime it even speaks loudly through the mouths of dissident ministers of religion: "THOU SHALT NOT KILL.")

This must be most annoying to national policies that are set to achieve lebensraum by the slaughter of neighbors. The Nazi philosophers have spoken resentfully of the Judo-Christian concept of life that softens the fiber of people. In the Jewish teaching they have discovered a dark conspiracy of Jews to weaken the will of Aryans to fight and kill and die.

The Nazis attempted to repeal the Jewish Commandment against killing. In their revised version of the Ten Commandments it is prohibited only to kill a 100 percent Aryan in the Fatherland; it is all right to purge the earth of all others who have not the required bloodstream or who stand in the way of Aryan destiny. Those insufferable Jews forbid any killing at all.

Coveting also is prohibited by the Jewish Commandments. If the Jews had their way—as expressed in this Commandment—there wouldn't be any such patriotic enterprise as that which grabbed Norway, Denmark, Holland, or Belgium. The Jewish concept against coveting and stealing (yes, our Commandment also forbids stealing) is an intervention in the processes of conquest. There is always somebody, influenced by Jewish teaching, to say: "That is stealing."

That's what must be the matter with me: I, the Jew, am the eternal nuisance who stands in the way with the two tablets. I stand in the way of the thieves, the liars and the killers with my two tablets.

Not that I am putting on any airs of being a fellow who himself always obeys all the commandments that were put in his keeping. Goodness no! I, the ordained guardian of the Ten Commandments, am really no better or worse than the run of people. I, the Jew, am just poor human frailty holding up an idea for everyone to see.

But I am ordained to stand among the stukas and tanks, pointing to the writing: "Here it is, gentlemen. It says plainly that we shall not kill."

Amid the phalanxes of the thieves my tablets flash the Law in letters of fire: "Thou shalt not steal." I carry dictates in a world of dictators. This is my destiny: To be a messenger of moral law in an immoral order.

Terrorist Killed In Gun Battle

By Jewish Telegraph Agency

TEL AVIV—Abraham Stern, alleged leader of the terrorist band that has caused death and destruction in Tel Aviv and Haifa during the past month, was killed this week in a gun battle with police who surrounded him in his hide-out on Florentin street, here. A bomb explosion charged to Stern's gang killed three policemen here on January 20. A reward of L1,000 had been offered for Stern's capture.

The police also arrested Baruch Moisewitz as one of the suspected terrorists. It was charged that his fingerprints allegedly corresponded to the marks left on incriminating material recently seized by the police here.

A Jewish electrician, Jacob Hershman, disappeared this week from Tel Aviv. It is believed that he was kidnapped. Police have started an investigation.

More than 1,000 German-Jewish refugees fell into the hands of the Japanese in Manila, it was estimated this week. Scores of

BOOKS

JACOB, a novel by Irving Fineman; Random House, 20 E. 57th St., N. Y. C. Reviewed by Rabbi Milton Greenwald.

MANY WILL say that in his new novel, "Jacob," Irving Fineman again has written a Jewish theme. But has he? Because Jacob, and Esau, and Rebecca, and Rachel are the names of Biblical characters, it might be called a Jewish theme! But because the Jacob of the book is earthly, and all the characters are portrayed with realism, in all the errors and weaknesses of human nature it is more than a novel of Jewish interest.

The life of the patriarch, Jacob, is portrayed in autobiographical form. Using all the devices and probes of modern psychology, Mr. Fineman has recovered and reconstructed for us the incidents of the Biblical narrative, with the result that Jacob is portrayed not as the "Prince of God" who wrestled with angels, but as a very fallible mortal, who loves and hates, who dissembles, and shrewdly keeps on the path of his own best interests, even as men do today. In other words, words too-oft repeated, the author makes his characters human!

Somehow, this taking of liberties with Biblical characters, does not sit well. The tale in the Book of Genesis has already portrayed a Jacob who is heir to many familiar weaknesses, and because he was in the Bible, we often wondered how he got there—despite what he did! Mr. Fineman explains, in terms of the latest findings of psychology, and Jacob, I fear is the victim of his portraitist. Mr. Fineman writes well. Had he clothed his characters in modern garb, they might have been people such as we know and such as many enjoy reading about, our taste in reading being what it is. I, however, would rather see Shakespeare in modern dress, than see the Bible over-dressed in modern psychology.

To handle Biblical characters in realistic fashion, and yet not diminish their stature, is difficult. Few can do it; I know no one who has done it better than Franz Werfel, with Jeremiah, in his too-little appreciated "Hearken to the Voice." Mr. Fineman falls short of this achievement. —M. G.

Oppman is chairman in charge. The National Workers Alliance will hold a Third Seder Supper on April 5, at Temple Beth El. Mrs. A. J. Krevitz heads the committee with Mrs. Tropp and Mrs. Garfin as co-helpers. The program committee is Mrs. Morris Chaikin and Mrs. Rogers. "SING-A-LING" NEW AUXILIARY IDEA FOR RAISING MONEY

Formation of "Sing-a-ling," to sing greetings by telephone for birthdays, anniversaries, engagements and other happy occasions, was announced this week by Mrs. William Decklebaum and Mrs. Alvin Cohen, of the Women's Auxiliary of the Indianapolis lodge of B'nai B'rith.

The innovation will bring song greetings by telephone for only 25 cents a greeting, the co-chairmen announced. In making public the service to the Jewish community, the co-chairmen also were willing to make public the following poetry:

Our voices aren't hot.
You'll be glad that they're not.
That will be half the fun,
For our verses are clever,
And we'll endeavor
To bring greetings to everyone.
Proceeds of "Sing-a-ling" will go to the Auxiliary Hillel Fund. Those wishing to use the new service are asked to call either HU. 7454 or WA. 5901.

Mexican Paper Defies Henry Ford

By Jewish Telegraph Agency
MEXICO CITY—Spanish translations of the pamphlet, "The International Jew," the author of which, Henry Ford, recently requested the Mexican government to have them withdrawn from circulation, are still being advertised in the Fascist newspaper Vanguardia, here. This paper also "highly recommends" the Protocols of Zion.

Vanguardia openly carries a swastika on its masthead and contains frequent anti-American and anti-Jewish articles. The paper is edited by Ruben Moreno Padres, who was jailed some time ago on the charge that he was connected with Dr. Goebbels' Nazi propaganda machine. In an editorial in the same issue that carries the advertisement for the anti-Semitic pamphlets and other anti-Jewish articles, Moreno alleges that his arrest was due to his having been "sold out to interational Jewry."

Cameron Hits Bias

By Jewish Telegraph Agency
DETROIT — Anti-Semitism as well as prejudice against any person because of his color or race, was assailed here this week by William J. Cameron, former editor of the defunct anti-Semitic Dearborn Independent, in his weekly broadcast on the Sunday evening hour, sponsored by Henry Ford, who was the publisher of the Dearborn publication.

Public Is Urged To Use Trolleys Less During Rush Hours

An appeal that housewives, shoppers and non-employed persons confine their transit riding to off-peak hours, namely between 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., has been made by Indianapolis Railways in the interest of national defense.

Restrictions on autos and tires have brought an influx of new riders to the local system, many of whom are defense workers who must get to their jobs on time. This increase in riding has occurred mainly during the rush hours when all available vehicles owned by the system are now in use.

The only way to solve this problem and get defense workers and employed persons to and from their jobs on time is for casual riders to make their trips during the quiet hours of the day. This will leave more room for vital workers during the peaks.

With public cooperation in this matter Indianapolis Railways expects to be able to meet the mounting demands for transit service as auto and tire restrictions become more acute. The rush hours occur from 7 to 9 a. m. in the morning and 4 to 6 p. m. in the evening. There are ample vehicles to accommodate all riders at other hours of the day.

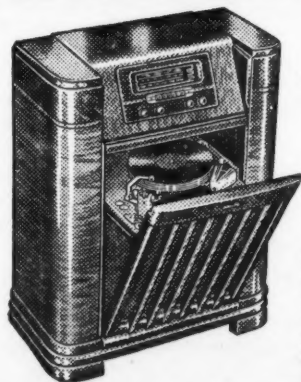

ner and Mrs. Sarah Perling have returned home from Denver, Colo., where they attended the graduation exercise of Bernard Wintner from the Army Aviation Cadet Training School. Rev. Joseph G. Moore was the guest speaker at the Brotherhood meeting of the Adath Israel Synagogue. He spoke on "Brotherhood Week."

The editor's chair:

I spoke to the Southport Methodist Church Wednesday night as part of their observance of Brotherhood week, and although I went there prepared to answer a lot of questions on prejudice against the Jewish people, it turned out that the principal interest was actually about the Jewish religion. Only one question was about Hitler and why he was so set against the Jewish people, and all the others were about the Jewish attitude to Christ, the Jewish holidays, the difference between Orthodox and Reform Judaism, and why Jews don't eat pork, etc.

I was surprised also at the preparation the Methodist Church nationally had gone to, to make Brotherhood week really mean something to its membership. As part of the program, ten members of the group arose and recited what could be called, as far as the Church audience was concerned a "remarkable" about the Jewish people. For instance one person arose and recited that five members of Columbus' crew were Jewish. Another recited that a Jew financed Columbus' trip to this world, and that two other Jews made his voyage possible by having drawn the maps and expounded the theory that the world was round. Other "remarkables" were that ten per cent of the Nobel prizes winners were Jewish, that Haym Salomon had given his fortune to the Revolutionary cause, and so on. All the material had been prepared by the national office of The Methodist Church, and indicates that the Church is trying to implement its teachings on brotherly love and understanding.

It didn't occur to me at the time, but our "In the Service Now" column is proving to be a common meeting ground for the Indiana men in the armed services of our country. You can readily see this by the letters we receive. When someone in the army or navy is transferred and wants not only his Indianapolis and Indiana friends, but also the Indiana men stationed around the country and in foreign parts to know about it, all he has to do is write to this column, and his message is thereby transmitted (Cont. in last column)

No Greater Sorrow

THE BITTERLY tragic experience of Dr. Chaim Weismann, president of the World Zionist Organization, in learning of the loss of his son, who he had hoped would be his successor in conducting important research work in chemistry, after a reconnaissance flight shortly before the German battleship dash last week, plumbs the depths of human compassion. Dr. Weismann and Mrs. Weismann were on the point of embarking for the United States by clipper when they were advised by the Air Ministry that their 24-year-old son Michael, a lieutenant in the RAF, was missing. That Michael was a gifted chemist may add to the effect of his loss, but to his parents, there is nothing that anyone can either add or subtract or do or say that will in any way change the dreariness and desolation in their lives.

Terrorists in Palestine

THE NEWS of the activities of a terrorist gang in Palestine must be as confusing to most people as it is to The Post. Why should any Jewish gang, bent only on killing and destruction, terrorize Tel Aviv and Haifa. The terrorists in Russia were understandable because they were revolutionists burning with anger against oppressive Czarist government, but what are the aims of the Palestinian gang? Are they anti-British? Are they anti-Zionist? Are their acts aimed at Arabs? If either, what do they hope to accomplish, and are they an isolated group or part of an organized uprising? The whole situation is hidden no doubt in official censorship.

What news has leaked out doesn't even afford the slightest shred for conjecture. For all The Post knows the gang may actually be martyrs to the Jewish cause, and it seems that censorship in this case is detrimental rather than salutary.

No Waiting List Here

SOMEWHERE there is an editorial in the announcement of The London Jewish Chronicle that it has been compelled by the shortage of paper to temporarily close its subscribers' lists. A "waiting list" of those whose subscriptions cannot be entered has been opened. One thing is certain, the editorial has no reference to The Jewish Post, not so much as to shortage of paper, but specifically as to any "waiting list" for subscribers.

Brotherhood Meeting Sunday

ONE FRIDAY The Post writes that no community-wide celebrations of Brotherhood week had been planned for this city, and the very next day or so, announcement is made of a Brotherhood Day meeting at 3:30 p. m., Sunday, Feb. 22 in the World War Memorial building. Could it be that this is another instance of the effectiveness of The Post's editorials, or could it be that the Jewish representative on the body preparing the Sunday meeting was just waiting until The Post got out on a limb? From the look on H. Joseph Hyman's face in the picture in the Indianapolis Star Wednesday morning, The Post is inclined towards the latter belief.

Current Comment

Indiana Catholic and Record Says Teaching of Religion in Schools Unconstitutional — The Dean of the Indiana University School of Education believes that moral and religious teaching in the schools of America is "totally inadequate." He finds "there is growing up a generation lacking in necessary religious and moral qualities." The facts which he presents are the result not only of his own personal work but also the work of the university's bureau of co-operative research.

While we are not surprised at these findings we are surprised that a man of considerable pedagogical experience should intimate that the condition may be due to the want of Bible reading or Bible courses in the State supported schools. He knows that Bible reading and Bible courses are not lawful in schools supported by public taxes. It has been introduced in some States but is a flagrant violation of a fundamental law of our country, and it outrages the American system of public education as it now obtains. The Dean also should know that Bible reading of itself and by itself never will make for morality. There can be no "Bible courses" which are not sectarian, and sectarianism as it is generally understood has no place in a public school. The Bible is absolutely useless to child or adult unless it be explained and interpreted by one having authority. The written Constitution is of no purpose without a Court to pass judgment on its meaning. It is equally true today as in the days of the Apostles that many wrest the Scripture to their own destruction. In the hands of men learned in its text the Bible has been quoted as authority for every conceivable religious doctrine and the basis of every conceivable standard of morals. We recognize with the Dean that "there is growing up a generation lacking in necessary religious and moral qualities." We are aware that "many teachers and administrators of schools readily admit an interest in character training and evidence a sincere concern over the moral welfare of our youth."

The Dean laments that "they, nevertheless, are hesitant to inaugurate, or to carry out, any definite teaching on the subject." This hesitancy is quite understandable. These teachers know that there can be no true character or true morality unless it be founded on religion. And religion can have no place in the educational content of our public school or state university.

That may be the reason why I am so unpopular.

Yet I shall keep on holding up the two tablets to the eyes of the thieves, the liars and the killers. I shall stand in their way. This may be what I, the Jew, am here for—to stand in the way with my tablets — despised but standing firmly in the way and calling attention to the writing on the tablets.

"Yes, mankind, I have been given this Law to carry in the world. It seems good Law if we only tried it. I am not a giver of this Law and no more holy than other men. By grace of having been early in civilization I happen to be its messenger. Suppose we try it."

It may take another millenium to make the Ten Commandments popular, but one thing I am sure of: Long after the Nuremberg laws are only interesting relics of man's inhumanity to man, this Law of which I am the keeper still will be the ideal of righteous men. I shall be standing there in the way of the transgressors with my two tablets.

New York Times questions the loyalty of those favoring a Jewish army. Their argument is based on entirely different grounds. The reason is simple. You lack a sense of security. Just as a little fellow will fight at the drop of a pin in order to prove that he is afraid of nothing, so you feel it necessary to argue your Americanism at the slightest provocation. You shudder at the thought of being pointed out as being different from anyone else. This is understandable. The fear of which I accuse you is quite clear. You lack status. NOT in the eyes of the Goyim, but in your own eyes. Zionists don't lack status. They feel themselves to be at home in all democracies, because their love is to an ideal which their land personified, not vice versa.

EVANSVILLE DOING FINE JOB ON BROTHERHOOD WEEK

To the editor,

I am happy to read of Fort Wayne's splendid participation in current Brotherhood activities, but in your praise for them, by implication you cast aspersions on the other communities of the state.

Evansville has had an active inter-faith organization since early in 1933. Each year a full program of activities is carried on, not only during Brotherhood Week, but throughout the year.

The pilgrimage of churches, sponsored by our Women's division, was organized two years ago. In addition to this activity the group has arranged for speakers before all women's clubs, P. T. A., etc. A youth division is in process of organization.

I mention this, not to detract from the accomplishments in Fort Wayne, but to point to the fact that other communities are equally alert to this fine American project. Much is being done. That much more need be done, is true. Let us hope that this fine movement will grow into the heart of every city and village in our country.

everywhere at once. The column is working out like an information exchange, and now that practically everyone in the service gets The Post, is really performing a service all its own.

Tuesday an article about a meeting of a local organization was phoned in to one of the girls in the office, and just shortly afterwards someone who refused to give their named called and said she was "going to knock" The Post if the item didn't appear on the first page. It would seem that by now people would know that I can't be threatened. I hate to penalize any organization because of the viciousness of one person in it, but that article will get on page one over my dead body. Also I wish that I could find out who the brave person was who did the telephoning, because not only would I cancel her subscription but she would have to go to court to force me ever to sell her The Post again.
